

VE Day 75th anniversary 8th May (Friday!)

VE day stands for Victory in Europe day. We celebrate it because it marked the end of the war against Germany. Although it wasn't completely end of the war because Japan was still going, people still celebrated.

People crowded the streets in London for the first time in six years. The king and the royal family appeared on the balcony of the palace and Winston Churchill made an announcement "This is your victory".

After Hitler shot himself, Germany knew they could not win the war. So the German army surrendered.
