

The Door

When I woke up this morning, I found a small door in my wall. I was puzzled because I had never seen it there before. As I opened the door I started to hear a sound from inside. When I opened it all the way I saw a bunch of little elves dancing to music; but when they saw me they ran away.

After that, I started to look around the door and I found a button. As I pressed the button the door grew more and more until I could fit inside. I thought to myself should I go through the door or stay in my room? I decided to go in but, when I walked through the door, it disappeared. I couldn't get back! I looked around and it looked like I was in someone's house.

I heard another door open and saw a little elf holding some bread. The elf got scared, dropped the bread and ran away. I chased after it and after a while I finally caught up to it.

As I caught my breath, I asked the elf "Where am I?" The elf replied "You're in the land of elves." I got confused because I thought elves were mythical creatures, but I was wrong, they were real! A lot more elves came up to me and asked "How did you get here?!" and "Who are you?" I answered saying "I'm George and I found a door in the corner of my room so I pressed a button beside it and the door grew bigger and bigger until I could fit through it, but when I walked through the door disappeared."

The elves said "We have a door to get back." So they led me to the door. I pressed the button again and it grew larger and larger. Before I went back through the door I said thank you to all of them for helping me, and then I went back to my bedroom and the door disappeared.

The End